THE JAZZ COMPOSERS COLLECTIVE
212-995-1552 • www.jazzcollective.com

Established in 1992, the Jazz Composers Collective is a non-profit, musician-run, NYC-based organization dedicated to fostering the development, performance & documentation of new music and building audiences for jazz.

Bassist Ben Allison is one of those heroic characters on the New York scene who combines organizational energy with huge creative talent.

— Jazz Review (UK)

Michael Blake is a double-horned wonder, often conjuring Rahsaan's thar-she-blows textural character, yet coming up with a personal sort of lyricism deep enough to make you think he's either an old soul or his car just got towed again.

— Village Voice

Mellow yet edgy, unsettling yet soothing, varied yet coherent, Ron Horton's complex yet melodic music balances enough facets that it's endlessly fascinating.

— Jazziz

[Frank Kimbrough] is among New York's finest pianists. He and his [trio], combine a great love of melody and time with curiosity fueled by freer structures.

— Downbeat

Ted Nash fills his solos with ideas rather than rote lines; he's a consistently thoughtful player who bulks up his melodic statements with controlled passion.
